Farmer. Distance of Orchard Trees .- In the Prairie Former of August 17, 500 MONETARY AND STOCKS. Prairie Former of August 17, you give directions for planting the orchard twenty-five by sixteen feet. This is too close by one-half. I find my Ben Davis and willow twig, at twenty-five feet each way, fifteen years set, covering the ground mostly, the limbs touching together in some places. The Tetolski, sweet June, early Joe, Domine and Wagner, may be set sixteen feet apart each way, and the greater part of the orchard thirty-two feet; setting three short-lived and short-growers at one end, with the rows so as to plow straight. with the rows so as to plow straight through, and all of equal distance

FIELD CROPS.

About Wheat Culture.—My opinion is that a great many farmers make a mistake in drilling their wheat. Before they had drills they towed two bushels broadcast on an acre. When they get drills they sowed the rame amount, and in a few years they complained that they did not get so many bushels per acre as they got when they sowed their wheat broadcast. I think if they had sowed a bushel and a half they would have had better results. On extra rich soil one bushel is enough, and it never pays to have wheat on poor, worn out soil. But still there are farmers who think they can raise wheat on poor soil if they sow over two bushels of highly praised wheat on en acre. I would like to know two bushels of highly praised wheat on an acre. I would like to know how a square inch of soil can produce four or five well fitted heads of wheat when there is hardly enough substance in the square inch to produce one wel-filled head. Several years ago I made an experiment on middling rich soil. One acre I drilled with one In the square inch to produce one with filled head. Several gests ago I made an experiment ou midding rich soil. One acre I drilled with one bushel of wheat, one acre with one and our-helt tushels, and one acre with two bushels. The acre where I drilled one tushel produced fifteen bushels; the acre where I drilled expects produced eighteen; and the acre where I drilled expects produced eighteen; and the farewhere I drilled two bushels produced exteen bushels. Thick seeding singular. About eight years ago I summer failowed one acre and scwed two bushels wheat broadcast on it, and got twenty-eight bushels of clean wheat and two tons of straw, In part of the same field I had oats which it was said they spreciated the good will of that government, in which it was said they spreciated the good will of that government, and we intended to maintain the best of relations with ft. which I sowed to wheat also, and from that part of the field I got consequently in prime condition for the clover seed. Some farmers saw too little seed to the acre. They seem not to be fully aware of the real importance of thick sowing of clover seed. We would not think of sowing less than ten pounds of clover seed to the acre, with timothy seed or other small seeds, say, five pounds. With that seeding we would expect plants enough to keep down the weeds, to bear a large cutting for solling or hay, and to enrich the ground highly with the abundance of taproots, Remember—the farmer who sows sparingly receives corresponding returns.—
